

Abstract of the Disclosure

Systems and methods manage configurations for multiple OSS components. A method starts by receiving a high level configuration that includes multiple high level configuration items. The high level configuration is translated to a low level configuration, the low level configuration including multiple low level configuration items. The low level configuration is translated to at least one OSS component specific configuration and sent to the OSS component.